Selectboard

The Selectboard along with Michele Giarusso traveled to Springfield, MA at the end of January to accept the technology grant from Lieutenant Governor Polito. Software updates for our financial team are expected to be around $25,000, the rest will be used for hardware, technical support and training. This grant will be well served for the town. Michele, Susan and Stacey will be putting everything together to bring the town up to date to serve our accounting needs better as we sunset the current software as of June 30th.

munity Service Program completed the painting of the town office building. They did a terrific job patching many holes, fixing minor broken fixtures and repainted every room. The former school is bright and clean. We thank everyone for putting up with the disruption and putting their offices back together. The future of the building as a gathering for meetings, office space and other possible uses will be a true asset for the town.

The Selectboard along with Nicole Glabach, Town Clerk, will be holding our Town Caucus on March 16th at 7:00pm upstairs in the Town Hall. After the caucus the positions will be advertised for elections to be held at our Annual Town Meeting on May 16th.

We thank Karin Parks for hosting Senator Jo Comerford on February 8th as she toured Libraries around Franklin County. The dining hall was filled with town residents as the Senator gave an overview of her first year in office. It was good to listen to how our state government is performing and the impact she has made during her first year. She opened the floor to questions. We again mentioned the impact the rising cost of the PVRSD and how the increases each year are unsustainable.

At the recent PVRSD budget public hearing we expressed concern at another large increase in our assessment for 2021. At a recent School Committee meeting they voted the budget as presented and then increased it by bringing back an adjustment counselor. With Warwick Elementary school targeted to close we hope they sharpen their pencils a little bit better before town meetings. The budget approved did not include any savings from the closure.

Dan Galvis has installed the defibrillators, one at the Town Hall dining room and one at the Leyden Town Office Building. Dan is also working out and testing a few bugs in the Reverse 911 system. We used the system recently to send out notices to inform residents of a rabid raccoon. If you have not signed up yet please sign up via the town website @ townofleyden.com

Respectfully,

Jeff, Lance and Bill

"She knew just who she was, knew who she could be. And this belief in herself, set Cordelia free. Just because another can't see this world like you, doesn't make things impossible or mean they are not true."
-Michelle Nelson-Schmidt

February was great! We enjoyed a visit from Senator Comerford at the library and hosted an informal discussion at the Town Hall. A great group of folks came and discussed the important issues happening in our state. We are happy to hear of her support for libraries! The next day after that we had a VERY well attended Storytime. We read three of my favorite Valentine's themed books and made fun little wooden signs. Thank you to the café staff for making the time so special! Also thanks to Ruth Tuller for donating craft supplies and to Lois Feldman for baking some scrumptious cookies! After we finished our craft the kiddos chanted a request for a field trip down to the library. Off we went on a parade down to the library and checked out books. My librarian heart was oh so happy!

Welcome to March! We are one step closer to spring. I for one am most excited about the sun going down later! This month kicks off a bunch of fun at the library! Sunday March 1st we will host another story time and craft at the Café. This month we will focus on my favorite children's author Michelle Nelson-Schmidt. Ms. Michelle is an author and illustrator from Florida who has written some amazing stories that empower folks of all ages. You may remember last fall when the library entered into Scarecrow in the Park, our scarecrows were based from her books. With a little bit of book lady magic, Ms. Michelle is coming to visit us here in little old Leyden on March 10th at 6pm in the Town Hall! The event will be open to the public and she will have autographed copies for sale of all of her books and some stuffed characters. What if you came and had a fantastic time?

Leyden is one of the 25 local libraries involved in Libraries In The Woods and we are working hard on some fantastic programs all centered around the book Braiding Sweetgrass: Indigenous Wisdom, Scientific Knowledge, and the Teachings of Plants by Dr. Robin Wall Kimmerer. It is a beautiful collection of essays based upon the love of science, nature and culture. We have multiple copies of this book for your reading pleasure. In April we will have a nature walk activity, independent scavenger hunts, photo contests and some fantastic speakers! Stay tuned!

Come on in and 'check' us out! Want to know all of the news first? Find us on Facebook! Do you have a question or want to volunteer? Feel free to email me at leydenlibrary@gmail.com or you can reach me at (413)522-2581 for call or text.

A tribute to mastermind Agatha Christie, KNIVES OUT is a fun, modern-day murder mystery where everyone is a suspect. Renowned crime novelist Harlan Thrombey is found dead at his estate just after his 85th birthday. The inquisitive and debonair Detective Benoit Blanc is mysteriously enlisted to investigate. From Halan's dysfunctional family to his devoted staff, Blanc sifts through a web of red herrings and self-serving lies to uncover the truth behind Harlan's untimely death. The all-star ensemble cast includes Daniel Craig, Christopher Plummer, Chris Evans, Jamie Lee Curtis, Toni Collette, and Don Johnson. Described as "a witty and stylish whodunit guaranteed to keep audiences guessing until the very end."

Climate Corner

Omnivore? Vegetarian? A recent conversation with my daughter about food sources around the world reminded me once again that, in our culture, most of us have many food choices. What could be more personal than what we choose to put inside our bodies? Yet here, too, those choices affect others around us, even on the grand scale of climate. And, like so many other aspects acting on our concerns about climate, it's complicated.

According to Project Drawdown moving to a plant-rich diet is among the top five actions, in terms of cost benefit calculations, that we can take to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Notice that the action calls for a reduction in our reliance on animal protein, not an elimination. Elimination is certainly not feasible in many parts of the world and unlikely for many others. Livestock-cattle, sheep, pigs, chickens-and their products occupy a large role in many Americans' diets. While we are advised that eating less meat should be a goal of the health conscious individual, it is also better for the climate, overall. Here's where the complicated part arises. Because ... it is also true that among the top approaches to reducing greenhouse gases are regenerative agriculture practices, farmland restoration and silvopasturing, all of which can be undertaken while farming livestock.

Grazing livestock can also provide climate positive effects aside from such practices. Fifty percent more carbon is stored in grasslands across the planet than in forests. Conservation of grasslands and the attendant grazing contributes to biodiversity of plant species, helps promote seed dispersal and provides food sources for pollinators. Additionally, livestock often utilize land that is unsuitable for other crops. In Leyden we are fortunate to have local sources of pork, lamb, chicken and dairy products. Eating locally grown foods should be factored into any calculus of one's carbon footprint.

The production and consumption of food will play a large role in our collective approach to reducing carbon emissions. That is why Project Drawdown also lists silvopasturing, regenerative agriculture and farmland restoration among the top approaches capable of reducing greenhouse gases. Look for more on these topics in future columns. That is because we have choices and there's often more to the story.

Poetry Corner

Paula Sayword's full length book of poetry, Canticle of Light and Dark was published by The Synthesis Center Press. A chapbook, What Sleeps Inside was published by Slate Roof Press in the summer of 2010. After living in Leyden for thirty years, Paula will soon be leaving the hill and moving down into the valley.

The Leaving

For Genie Zeiger

Strangers took the last cows, loaded them, terrified, up a sloped ramp.
Uncertain hooves clattered on cold metal,
dark truck mouth open wide to receive them.
Their breath hung white,
startled in frigid morning air.
They had never left the earth like this,
had only known the feel of pasture, concrete floor of the barn,
a cold creek bottom where pebbles washed clean over soft sand.
From the house he watched them go,
heard the truck's rumble
fade with distance, inhaled the remaining silence
as it settled over the farm.
His barn was empty now,
missing the big warm bodies
of cows with their stupid trust,
sounds of lowing,
clank of milking stanchions
as they shifted their bodies' burden.
In a feed lot somewhere,
they would patiently wait for auction,
as the sun rose on another morning,
the day caring nothing for a herd of cows
or the man still staring out his window.

If you have a poem you would like to share,
please send it to me by the 10th of the month
for publication the following month.

Board of Health

A raccoon that was found on Coates Road in early February tested positive for rabies.

If you suspect a raccoon is rabid, stay far away from it and call Shelburne Control Police (413-625-8200) for help. DO NOT attempt to take care of it by yourself. Raccoons can transmit rabies to all other mammals, including humans.

In some states, raccoons are classified as a rabies vector species (RVS), which means they can carry and transmit diseases. Any mammal can do that, but raccoons are at a higher risk. Make sure that all your pets are up to date with their rabies vaccines.

How to Tell If a Raccoon Is Rabid

Here are five typical signs of a rabid raccoon:

- Appears to look sick- raccoons can contract a variety of diseases, but you should not risk coming into contact with a sick raccoon.
- Foaming at the mouth – One of the most well-known symptoms of rabies. If you spot this, be sure to keep your distance.
- Making strange noises – most raccoons make noises, but a sick raccoon will make uncommon noises.
- Looks confused, disoriented, and slow – a healthy raccoon will look busy as they are very active and intelligent.
- Difficulty walking – Paralysis in the legs is often a symptom of rabies.

Help Make Sure Everyone Counts in Our Community Coming Soon! The 2020 U.S. Census is safe, easy and important.

Every 10 years, the U.S. Census counts every person living in the U.S.A. In mid-March every household in town will get an invitation to complete the 2020 U.S. Census. Most households will receive this by mail, some will have it hand-delivered. If no one from the household responds by mid-April, you will be mailed a paper copy of the questionnaire to complete and mail back. If there is no response by late April, an official Census-taker may visit the household to complete the questionnaire in person.

The questionnaire is short and takes just a few minutes to complete. The information gathered in the U.S. Census is safe and confidential. Only names and birth dates are collected, no one will be asked for Social Security numbers or bank or credit card information.

The U.S. Census impacts our community in two main ways: representation and money. The population count will be used to determine political representation at the state and national level. The count also helps determine how much federal and state money comes to our community to help pay for education, roads, transportation, housing, health care, and more. If we don't get an accurate count, our community will not receive the money needed to pay for crucial services each year for the next ten years!

Want to learn more? Visit <https://2020census.gov/>

Need help getting online to complete the 2020 Census? Questionnaire Assistance Centers will be set up in March at locations across the county. The list of Centers will be posted online at <https://frcog.org/publication/view/census-2020-preparation/> and shared with your local library, senior center, or town hall in March.
